Historical Site of Albertville

Pre-Civil War Cemetery

A great place to begin studying the history of Albertville is the city's West Main Street Cemetery, where most of Albertville's prominent early settlers are buried. One such citizen was Thomas A. Albert, one of the first men to live on Sand Mountain. Born in Georgia in 1776, he fought in the War of 1812. Later, after he married, he moved into Marshall County to settle the area that would later be named in his honor. He lived in Albertville until his death in 1876. Albertville's first Mayor and State Representative, William M. Coleman, is also buried here. He is noteworthy for his work in the passage of the Agricultural School Bill.

The West Main Street Cemetery began in the late 1850's. Many of the monument's names and dates are barely legible due to the effects of time and the elements. But two stones seemingly unweathered are the markers of T.J. Hamlin, 1825-1881, and Mary Hamlin, 1831-1873. On these tombstones, both made from an old rock, the inscriptions were carved using a hammer and chisel. They have been standing side-by-side for over a hundred years.

Other notable Albertville settlers buried in the West Main Street Cemetery are S.M. Elrod, one of the first physicians located on Sand Mountain; W.M. Scarbrough, one of the early Baptist preachers in the area; federal Judge L. Edward Creel Jr.; Joseph Kellet, a sergeant in the Civil War; L.S. Emmett, a Civil War veteran and one of Albertville's graves of soldiers who fought in the Civil War.

It is unclear just how many of the graves are simply marked by a brick or fieldstone, half hidden by the overgrown grass. As the first highway cut through the area, road crews laid the road to curve around the cemetery. People in town didn't want the graveyard to be disturbed, and the highway workers honored their wishes.
